him for needed medical help. With alacrity and enthusiasm, he would pick up the phone and talk to his doctor friends. And later he would follow up, to check on the health of my colleagues. I also remember seeking his help to get accommodation built for junior officers of the Indian Economic Service (IES), who live for up to 15 years of their early career in transit housing in New Delhi. He was visibly moved when he saw pictures of the shabby apartments that professionals serving the nation were forced to live in; when they told him how embarrassing it was to have family see them in such accommodation. And then he legislative accomplishments: the GST, the Bankruptcy Code, the real estate bill, the establishment of the Monetary Policy Committee (MPC). Perhaps the biggest of these accomplishments was the introduction of the GST. Yes, there were flaws in design and implementation. Even so, the GST was an astonishing accomplishment: an achievement of political consensus building in a difficult, fractious democracy; an achievement of administration, in which the tax departments of the Centre and the states worked together to create one tax; and an achievement of technology, in which new systems were created, a radical decentralization of fiscal resources. Very influential people argued that the recommendations would constrain the Centre, and thereby backfire on it. But Mr. Jaitley responded that the Finance Commission's views should be respected, because the institution has served India so well for so many decades. And his persuasive skills carried the day. In addition to Mr. Jaitley's behind-the-scenes accomplishments, his guiding hand and legal mind were responsible for some major legislative accomplishments: the GST, the Bankruptcy Code, the real estate bill, the establishment of the Monetary Policy Committee (MPC).
